Numb. 460.

THE Pennſylvania GAZETTE.

Containing the freſheſt Advices Foreign and Domeſtick.

From September 29. to October 6. 1737.

LONDON, June 27.

BY a Letter from Paris, we are inform'd, that M. Chauvelin and his Lady live contentedly at Bourges, keep open Houſe there, converſe very familiarly with the Town's People, and frequently amuſe themſelves with playing at Quadrille, Ombre, and Piquet. They keep thirty Domeſticks, and twenty-five Horſes. The People of Bourges, and the Country adjacent are highly pleaſed at M. Chauvelin's Reſidence amongſt them, becauſe of the large Sums of Money he expends with them. He is ſaid to be a Native of this Place, and that his Grandfather was an Advocate there. The Cardinal's Lenity is diſcover'd in this gentle Treatment of Monſ. Chauvelin, whoſe Puniſhment is no other than being deliver'd from the Fatigue of Buſineſs, and being forc'd to a pleaſing Retreat into his native Country.

On Saturday Morning the Venetian Ambaſſador [illegible] on his return home for the Court of Venice.

Laſt Saturday the four Troops of Horſe Guards, and the two Troops of Horſe Grenadier Guards, paſſed in Review in Hyde Park, and made a very fine Appearance. After which their Majeſties, with their Royal Highneſſes the Duke and the Princeſſes went to Richmond, to reſide there for ſome time. Their Royal Highneſſes the Prince and Princeſs of Wales came back to St. James's, where they intend to reſide this Week. There was the greateſt Appearance of Perſons of Quality and Diſtinction in Hyde-Park, on Horſeback and in Coaches, ever known at a Review.

We hear from Ickworth in Suffolk, that the Right Hon. the Earl of Briſtol lies at the point of Death there.

June 28. An Extract of a private Letter from the Hague.

'At a time when every Body believ'd that a Peace was 'not only concluded, but even ſolidly eſtabliſh'd amongſt 'the Chriſtian Powers, particularly between the Emperor, 'France and Spain, extraordinary Surprizes and War are 'much talk'd of; and when it was imagin'd that the 'Forces of Ruſſia and of the Emperor were determinately 'going to cruſh the Turks, we are told, what indeed ap'pears very ſtrange, that the Ruſſian Army does not ad'vance either towards Oczakow or Bender, and the Turks 'ſeem to be ſo little afraid of a Ruptme with the Emperor, 'that the Preparations made to oppoſe him are very incon'ſiderable.

'We have likewiſe with Aſtoniſhment heard, that the 'Court of France has caus'd ſix or eight thouſand Men to 'file off towards Savoy; that the King of Sardinia had aſ'ſembled a Body of Troops together; and that the Em'peror had countermanded two Regiments of Infantry 'which were to have march'd from Italy into Hungary, 'which Motions, we have juſt learned, have been made 'with deſign to prevent an Enterprize projected at the 'Court of Spain, and which, according to all Appearance, 'is no other than that which has been in Agitation there 'ever ſince the Death of M. Patinho. It was to put this 'Project in execution that Troops have ſo often aſſembled 'in Catalonia, and which have been as often diſmiſs'd, the 'Situation of Affairs never yet ſufficiently favouring the 'Deſign.

'It appears that ſuch particular Information has been 'given here of this Deſign, that the moſt minute Circum'ſtances of it are known; even Hints of all this have been 'dropt before the Marquis de St. Gilles, Ambaſſador of 'Spain; and it is from hence that the Imperial Court has 'been inform'd of it by its Miniſter Count d'Ulefeldt. It's 'reported, that the Intent of this Enterprize was to take 'Poſſeſſion of Tuſcany, and that an Entrance into that 'Country was to have been made thro' the State Degli Pre'ſidi, which abounds with Spaniſh and Neapolitan Troops. 'What Spain, it's apprehended, is now attempting, was 'long ſince foretold in a Letter from hence, even as ſoon 'as it was certainly known that the Territory juſt menti'on'd was to remain diſmember'd from Tuſcany, and con'tinue in the Hands of Spain. It's not known under what 'Pretext ſo extraordinary a Step as this can be taken; but 'if none at all can be brought to juſtify it, it's ſufficient, 'according to the Principles laid down in a famous Tract 'lately publiſh'd, entitled, A Letter upon the preſent Situati'on of Affairs, ſuppos'd to be wrote by the Marquis de Fe'nelon, that Tuſcany is convenient to his Catholick Ma'jeſty; ſince, according to the Doctrine of this Treatiſe, 'every Thing, even the moſt ſolemn Treaties, are to give 'way to the Law of Conveniency. But, perhaps, when 'it ſhall be known in Spain that the Match is diſcover'd, 'this Enterprize many vaniſh into Smoak, as it has done 'no leſs than three Times already: Whether it will take 'this turn, or will, notwithſtanding the Diſcovery, be 'proceeded in, we are impatient here to know.'

On Sunday laſt an unhappy Accident came to Thomas Spencer, Eſq; Serjeant at Arms to the Hon. Houſe of Commons, who was going in a Chaiſe to the Earl of Hertford's in Windſor-Foreſt, and very near his Lordſhip's Houſe, when the Horſes taking Fright at ſomething, ran away with the Chaiſe; Mr. Spencer endeavouring to ſave himſelf by jumping out, had the Misfortune to break both his Legs. He was immediately carry'd to his Lordſhip's, where he lies dangerouſly ill.

Letters are come to Briſtol from on board the Mancheſter, Capt. Watkins, arriv'd at Jamaica from Africa, adviſing, that in their Paſſage all the Slaves mutiny'd, and fell furiouſly on the Sailors, five of whom they murder'd; and before the Inſurrection could be quell'd, about Forty Slaves were either kill'd or drowned.

On Sunday Morning a Boy that was looking Birds-Neſts near the Half-way-Houſe between London and Greenwich, found the Body of a Man murder'd, his Head cut off, and laid in his Hat at a ſmall Diſtance from the Body. It's thought he had been kill'd about ten Days, the Vermin having eaten in him. He is believ'd to be a Sea-faring Man, having a ſpeckled Shirt on, and a Sailor's Habit.

From

From Rome, that the Emperor has caus'd it to be repreſented to the Pope, " that finding himſelf in Circum-
" ſtances which would perhaps oblige him to undertake a
" War with the Turks, his Imperial Majeſty promis'd
" himſelf, from the Religion of his Holineſs, that he
" would grant the ſame Subſidies as the Popes his Prede-
" ceſſors had furniſh'd him with on the like Occaſions."
" The Pope made Anſwer to the Emperor's Repreſentation,
" that he was diſpos'd to contribute to the utmoſt towards
" the Expence of this War; but that he very much wiſh'd
" that the Troops which his Imperial Majeſty deſign'd to
" employ againſt the Turks, had been commanded by a
" Captain who could have received Benefit from the A-
" poſtolick Benediction." It was eaſy to comprehend that the Pope intended to ſhew his Diſpleaſure that the Command of the Imperial Army in Hungary was given to Count Seckendorff, who is a Proteſtant. Count de Harrach, Miniſter to the Emperor, was ſo happy as to remove this Difficulty, by aſſuring his Holineſs that Count Seckendorff had only the ſecond Command in this Army, and that the Duke of Lorrain was Commander in Chief and Generaliſſimo.

From Ferrara, that the Sieur Antony Branzini, Captain of a Company in Garriſon in this City, has found out the Perpetual Motion, and has publiſh'd, from an entire Perſuaſion of the Infallibility of the Thing, that as ſoon as he ſhall know what Reward is allotted for that Diſcovery, and to whom he is to addreſs himſelf on this Occaſion, he will give a particular Account of his Invention, and ſatisfactory Proofs of the Reality thereof.

From Florence, that the Grand Duke has lately been in extreme Pain from a Retenſion of Urine. That Count Tirel, his firſt Gentleman was gone to meet the eldeſt Son of the Pretender, and to conduct him into this City. The Count who is an Iriſhman, has not taken this Step by order of the Duke. And that the Grand Duke being inform'd that the Society of Free Maſons grew numerous here, recommended it to the Inquiſitor to put a ſtop to the Progreſs of this new Fraternity, whereupon ſeveral of them have been taken up: From whence, and from what has been told us from France concerning this Society, we may conclude them Enemies to Popery and arbitrary Power, and of conſequence, that they are, as Gratitude and every other Virtue require them to be, Friends to the preſent Britiſh Eſtabliſhment, in which Country only they are permitted without Interruption publickly to ſubſiſt.

By Letters from Vienna we are advis'd, that the Court has receiv'd an Expreſs from the Veldt-Marſhal Count Seckendorff, which brought News of that General's Arrival at the Camp of Semlin; that he intended to march directly to join the Body of Troops aſſembled at Vapalanca, and afterwards to begin the Operations of the Campaign. This is the firſt Expreſs that Count Seckendorff has ſent to Court ſince he has taken on him the Command of the Army. It's confirm'd, that the Court has diſpatch'd an Expreſs to the ſame General, with Orders to begin, without Delay, the Operations againſt the Turks, and not to wait for the News of Count Munich's having begun Hoſtilities on his ſide. It's now ſaid, that the Campain will not be open'd by the Siege of Widdin, as it was believ'd, but by that of Niſa, a City in Servia, ſituate on the Niſſawe, the taking of which Place will be of ſo much the greater Importance, as it will ſecure the Conqueſt of that Province. The Emperor, from a Motive of Clemency, has declar'd, that the Turkiſh Slaves who ſerve on board the Gallies ſhall be ſet at Liberty after the War is put an end to.

London, July 2. On Thurſday the Right Hon. Arthur Onſlow, Speaker of the Houſe of Commons, the Right Hon. the Lords Monſon and Lovel, Sir John Norris, Sir Charles Wager, and ſeveral Perſons of Diſtinction, view'd a curious Inſtrument for finding out the Longitude, made by Mr. Harriſon of Leather-Lane, which he has been ſix Years in finiſhing. They all expreſs'd the greateſt Satisfaction at it, order'd him 250 l. and gave him Directions to make another, to be kept at the Admiralty, for which he is to have 250 l. more. This ingenious Gentleman was originally brought up a Joyner; and 'tis thought by Mathematicians, his Machine is nearer finding out the Longitude than any that ever was attempted of this kind.

July 5. Yeſterday arrived a Mail from Holland, with the following Copy of a private Letter from Petersburg, dated June 18. N. S.

'On the 14th Inſtant, about One o'Clock in the Morning, a Fire broke out in this City: It began near the Foundery, from which the Czarina's Summer Palace is only ſeparated by a Canal. The Progreſs of the Flames was ſo rapid, that in leſs than an Hour and half, they reduced a Ruſſian Church and 50 Houſes to Aſhes; and 'twas with very great Difficulty that they were prevented from ſpreading to the Arſenal, and to the Office of the Artillery. This is the third Fire that has happened within theſe three Weeks in the Quarter belonging to the Foundery. The Alarm and Confuſion occaſioned by the Darkneſs of the Night, were the greater, from the juſt Cauſe of Apprehenſion, that the Flames would reach the Czarina's Summer Palace. Her Imperial Majeſty being awak'd by the Noiſe, aroſe and went to the Window, where while ſhe was buſy in giving Orders, a Courier arrived from Moſcow, who was diſpatch'd by the Count de Soltikow, Chief Steward of the Empreſs's Houſhold, with the melancholy News of a great Fire which happened in that Capital on the 9th and 10th Inſtant.

'The Particulars brought by this Expreſs are, that on the 9th, betwixt 10 and 11 o'Clock in the Forenoon, there aroſe a great Hurricane, and at the ſame time a Fire broke out in a private Houſe behind the Caſtle of Cremelin; that the Offices and the Courts of Chancery, together with the Arſenal, were ſoon ſurrounded with the Flames, which being afterwards drove by the Fury of the Wind, over the Walls of the Caſtle, ſpread to the Kitay Gorod, or the Chineſe Quarter, which was entirely reduced to Aſhes, together with the Mint, the Grand Diſpenſatory, (which was reckon'd to be as well furniſh'd with Medicines as any in Europe) the Chancery of Siberia, and a great Number of Warehouſes and Shops, which were all burnt, together with a vaſt Quantity of Chineſe Goods and Furs of Siberia; that the Flames which nothing could ſtop, after having ravaged the Chineſe Quarter, ſpread to that of Bielgorod, and there reduced to Aſhes the Streets of Menitzkoy, Pokroſoky, Zeluſtoyproed, Jegehow, and the new Biſinan-
[illegible] that paſſing beyond the Walls of Bielgorod, they [illegible] to the Quarter call'd Semlenoy Gorod, from [illegible] whence the Fury of the Wind drove them to the Slabode or Quarter of the Germans, and that all the Houſes there, except three, were conſumed, together with the Palace of the late Admiral le Fort, the Roman Catholick Church, that of the Dutch Calviniſts, and the two Lutheran Churches; that the Sparks being drove beyond the River Jauſa, ſet Fire to the magnificent Hoſpital, which was lately built all of Stone, but was now burnt to the very Ground, as well as the Quarter in which the Soldiers lodg'd.

'This Fire laſted till about 5 o'Clock next Morning, and the Lives of near 3000 Perſons were thereby deſtroyed. The Country round about Moſcow is full of Inhabitants reduced to Miſery, who are expoſed to the Inclemencies of the open Air. Such was the Violence of the Flames in this Inſtance, that none of the Precautions formerly taken to prevent or ſuppreſs Fires availed any thing; for the Roofs, Doors and Shutters of Iron, with which moſt of the Palaces were ſecured, melted by the Heat of the Fire like Wax.

'Moſcow has before this ſuffered conſiderable Conflagrations.

'The firſt happen'd in 1571, when the Troops of the famous Zingiſchan, the Kan of the Tartars, took it and reduced it to Aſhes.

'In 1611 the Poles took it and burnt it to the Ground.

'In 1668 there happened a great Fire, by which three fourths of the City were conſumed.

'In 1703 another Fire broke out in it, which alſo made great Ravages: And there have been ſeveral Fires ſince that Time, which tho' not ſo conſiderable, have nevertheleſs been very fatal to the Inhabitants.'

Letters of the 11th ult. O. S. from Petersburg ſay, that on the 9th the Court received an Expreſs from Count Munich, with Advice that he was arrived with his Army within 28 Leagues of Oczakow, and that he hop'd in a few Days to give the Turks Battle.

PHILADELPHIA, October 6.

We hear from Antigua, that on the 27th of Auguſt laſt, they had a violent Hurricane among the Iſlands, which did a great deal of Damage. The following is an Extract of a Letter from thence.

By way of St. Chriſtophers, I hear that Mr. T-----, ſuffer'd to the amount of 6000 l. by the laſt Storm, viz. his dwelling Houſe, and both Wind-Mills blown down to the Ground, and his Barns ſhattered very much. It is not him alone that ſuffered, but almoſt every Body. Many Veſſels are ſuſpected to be loſt from the two Iſlands. One Sutton was ſeen overſet off St. Chriſtophers, in a few Hours after he put out; himſelf his Wife and one Child on board, and all loſt with the Ships Crew, except one Man who lived in the Sea twenty-three Hours. There are three or four Wrecks been ſeen, but not diſcovered who they are.
